

If lawmakers think this is a place to treat mental illness, they're out of their minds.

Photograph by Richard Bermack

Further cuts to California's mental health services budget will sentence thousands of people with mental illness to prison. What they really need is professional help, the kind of help that people can use to become productive citizens. Help us send a message to California decision makers, that any additional cuts to health and human services isn't a solution to the budget crisis. It's madness.